Appalachian State's six-foot monument to free speech

When one embarks upon a mission to eliminate speech codes from college campuses it's tough to know where to start. Some codes ban speech that is merely "offensive." Some ban speech that is "maligning." Others ban speech that "challenges." Imagine a college that guarantees a four year education without any fear of being challenged. It's as easy as imagining a worthless college education.

Whatever the reasons, it was just over a year ago today that we agreed to target the speech code at Appalachian State University. The "we" began as a joint effort between the Pope Center for Higher Education Policy in Raleigh and the Foundation for Individual Rights in Education in Philadelphia. The FIRE and the Pope Center wrote a report on censorship in the UNC system, which got surprisingly good coverage in the mainstream media.

Next, the Pope Center sent me out on a brief speaking tour covering several UNC campuses. Appalachian State was the third stop on the tour.

My speech at ASU went pretty well until I accidentally let my voice (which was raspy from a minor cold) slide into an impression of William Jefferson Clinton. As one who is well-known for his political impersonations I could not resist a little wisecrack. Looking down beneath the podium, I said - in my best Clinton accent - "Get up off the floor, Monica! I think I hear Hillary coming."

That's when I got an abrupt reminder of the "right to be un-offended," which is sincerely felt - though not actually held - by all of the liberal dope smoking hippies (about 2/3rds of the student population) at ASU.

In fact, two long-haired Clinton supporters got up and stormed out of the auditorium - turning off the lights as they left the room - just as soon as I made them uncomfortable with a flashback of Monica in thong underwear on the Oval Office floor. (I thought it was a pretty symbolic gesture. Once the first person gets offended, it's time for everyone else to go home.)

Of course, it wasn't exactly time to go home that evening. I finished my speech and then got to move on to the question and answer session. During the Q and A, a freshman at ASU asked me about the speech code. Specifically, he complained that a political science professor kept reminding him of the speech code every time he espoused a conservative idea in class discussion. But - no matter how far off the charts their comments might be - leftist students were never seen as running afoul of the code.

When the student asked if he had a legal case, I put him in touch with the Alliance Defense Fund. But while the legal complaint was still being drafted, something unexpected happened. The local ACLU did the right thing and got involved.

As a result of the team effort, ASU decided to get rid of its speech code without an embarrassing lawsuit. Consider the organizations that were involved in this successful First Amendment mission:

The ACLU: A left-wing civil liberties organization.

The ADF: A conservative Christian civil liberties organization.

DrAdams.org: A fringe group led by a right-wing gun-toting nut job from North Carolina.

The FIRE: A non-partisan free speech organization.

The Pope Center for Higher Education Policy: A libertarian/conservative

Find Your Graduating Class

I Graduated in:

group in North Carolina.

This left/right/center attack on the unconstitutional speech code at ASU shows that people of different political persuasions can work together, even in today's fractured political environment. But aside from the warm and fuzzy feeling we are all getting from knowing that we can put aside our differences and work together, there is another - perhaps even more important - benefit derived from the removal of the ASU speech code. It has something to do with feminist speech at ASU.

Now that the speech code is gone from ASU, the feminists at the Women's Center are free to pursue an important project they may have been afraid to pursue back when "offending others" was seen as trumping the First Amendment. I am talking, of course, about the construction of the six-foot vagina costume the Women's Center has been planning for the last several years.

After the ASU speech code was removed, construction of the six-foot vagina resumed and, thankfully, it was recently completed. Click here (warning: graphic photo) to see just how far the women's movement has come in recent years. Or just visit the campus of ASU where you can actually see a feminist walking around in a six-foot vagina costume.

It is worth remembering that the greatest evil of censorship is not that it robs us of the truth. It is that it robs us of a greater appreciation of the truth via its juxtaposition with feminist stupidity.

Author's Note: If you enjoy gratuitous attacks on the feminist movement, even when they bear little relation to the larger theme of the article, sign up for Dr. Adams' newsletter now. Recipients will automatically be entered into the raffle for a replica of UNC-W's new 7-foot vagina costume later this spring. It is rumored that "Virgie" will become the new mascot at UNCW. Now that Chancellor DePaolo has ruined the men's basketball program, we need something to stimulate interest in athletics.

Haha! Yes!

Congratulations on everyone involved in this particular endeavour. It's always good to see when speech which isn't Fighting Words gets to be made, free from interference by people who might find it a little queasy. And that liberals can realise that the point of liberalism is to allow people to say things that they may not like to hear.

Extra: Dr Adams, can I enter the draw without signing up for the Newsletter? It would elicit a chuckle or three when I show Vergie off to my mates.

Next case...

I think it's time you went after a bigger fish, Doc: the NCAA. You might have heard about their sanctions on colleges that use imagery considered offensive to Native Americans. On February 21, Chief Illiniwek performed his final half-time dance at the University of Illinois. The university has given in to the NCAA's demands and retired the Chief. I just wrote an editorial on this that I plan on sending to the campus newspaper at the University of Illinois. Check it out on my blog at <http://tylermillage.townhall.com/>

Here's my proposal:

The men at ASU should 'fight back' by being what the feminists THINK they are anyway.

By wearing "pen1s" shaped hats - they can be "d!ckheads" i (oops, punctuation got away from me.)

We need to fight back on this. If they can allow a woman in a 'vagina' suit, they MUST allow men to be 'd!ckheads.'

the U of Illinois can save themselves a lot of trouble by changing their name to the Fighting Vaginas. There's already a costume made for the mascot and everything! Plus, they can say they are showing support for their women's center. It's a win-win.

Immodesty Unbecoming

I admit it: I don't have the guts to go looking at the big vagina. And I don't want to see a d!ckhead. It may be funny, but it's also perverse.

There's a natural desire to indulge sexuality and marriage is a sanctified, time- and society-honored way to do this. The rank overexposure encouraged at college campuses across the country runs counter to what godly parents have been teaching their children from the day that Noah's grandson was condemned for laughing at Noah's nakedness.

It is just plain hedonistic to parade genetalia and sexuality in the town square, the campus quad and in the parade route.

And frankly, the immodesty is unbecoming.

Signs of societal degeneration

Ancient tribal societies highly valued fertility and therefore the sexual symbols. At least for them, it made sense. The production of progeny was highly desired and a survival mechanism. For example, the Incas worshipped the phalis because, as a dominant colonizing race, it needed numbers.

What is demented about the modern feminist fixation with the genitalia is that it's accompanied by a barbaric contempt for its primary function - fertility.

The contradictions are profound - the numbers needed by a society in order to ensure its survival and regeneration are denied by the very ones who are most in line to profit from such. And little reflection is given to the existence of the abortion mechanism that may very well have deprived them of existence.

All they would have to do is commit suicide to make the joke complete...

I wonder if that would satisfy leftist societal arbiters. It would then seem appropriate to also have the 'fighting dicks' on the other side of the field. Then they could chant, 'make war, not love' or 'stick it to'em' or 'fu*k'um, fu*k'um, raw, raw, raw'. Or would that be TOO offensive?

Poll the Toddlers

If you want to make sure that speech on any college campus or mainstream television program passes every speech code ever designed, just spend half a day at a daycare centre and tape the conversations between the two and three-year-olds. Anything these little poo poo heads spew is considered Protected Speech, and anything they do is considered "appropriate".

For some reason, the first thing university students do when given the right to "free speech" is start spewing vulgarity, profanity, blasphemy and pornography. Apparently there is a lake of language dammed up behind the wall Mommy and Daddy put up at the age of two when they spanked those nekkid butts that ran through their cocktail parties -- and until this lake is drained, it is impossible for 18-24 year olds to concentrate on anything that lives below their knees or above their waists. (Save, of course, boobies.)

With all the vast span of history, literature, music, art, religion, economics, dance, and discourse to choose from -- every time a college student is told he's free, they unpin their diapers and head right for the toilet to play with the contents thereof.

I am old enough now to begin to believe that I will never live long enough to see this trend diminish, dwindle and disappear.

AudiR10

I think you hit it on the head. People often tend to think that the right to do something relieves them of the responsibility to do it right. There's a time and a place for everything (c.f. Ecclesiastes 3:1-8) and often the public square isn't it.

I have every right to dislike the President whoever he may be, to think his policies are idiotic, to even consider him a moron, but I don't have the right to conspire to assault or kill him. Even suggesting it on the radio can get the Secret Service knocking on your door (That happened to a now-ex-girlfriend of mine during the Clinton years. She said something stupid on the radio (Gordon Liddy's show if I recall) and the Secret Service were at her door that afternoon.) You aren't allowed to joke about a terrorist act on an air plane, and you never were (at least in my lifetime.) Crying "Fire" in a crowded theater or otherwise inciting panic or riot is also illegal.

The problem is that the people who come up with their little speech codes are so arrogant as to think that their opinion (the Leftist agenda) is the only one sufficiently "informed" or "enlightened" to be considered worthy of expression. Any other opinion is ignorant, intolerant, and/or offensive, and, thus, is not protected by the First Amendment. And since Leftist speech is the only one that is protected, it is also expected that it will be appropriate for the public square, no matter how obscene, vulgar, or profane it is nor how insulting, degrading, or offensive it is to the public at large (who are just un-enlightened, ignorant, un-reasoned, intolerant religious fanatics, and far less equal than the Liberal Elites.)

What's with all the doom and gloom and "oh we're all going down the moral gutter?"

You're obviously not. Your kids, I assume, are going to be taught not to. And it's unlikely that anyone wearing a giant vagina suit (unless on a dare for large amounts of money) is going to have children any time soon. It's probably the most effective contraception there could ever be.

I'd take positives out of this article. It means that the ACLU lives up to its name. It means there are liberals like me who do practice what we preach and allow everyone to say as they like and not hide behind hypocritical "speech codes." It means that conservatives and liberals and everyone in between can work together on something that is very important and vital to the society that Americans live in.

And I quite like the idea of a 7 foot phallic costume. The comic and punning possibilities are endless. I don't know how much I'd have to pay the person wearing it, though.

Probably laughing is a better tactic today, but you're definitely on the right track in your thinking. The Left is ultimately anti-human.

Every work of the devil has within itself the seeds of its own destruction. As CS Lewis pointed out, he hates the people on his own side as much as he hates his enemies, and as soon as they're of no use to him, he'll tear them to pieces. This is why so much of demonic practice -- paganism, Marxism, homosexuality -- is self-destructive.

I realize there is a reasonably fair stereotype concerning the sexual preference of Feminists, so it might just be something they want to see, but what point are they trying to prove? Am I wrong or is this sort of nonsense exactly contradictory to their alleged position that women aren't sex toys for men? If they are worried about the sexual exploitation of women, shouldn't they be pushing for LESS sex, not more, from their followers?

Unfortunately, being a reasonable man, I cannot fathom the mind of unreasonable women. Even reasonable women are tough enough to figure, but the unreasonable ones are bloody impossible.

Provoke the Provokers, carry GUNS...

Look, you have to first understand the mentality behind this: they are trying to be as offensive as possible for the sole purpose of offending as many as possible. Their attitude is if you really don't want a hate speech ban, then look and see what you get as a consequence.

It is like the school administrator who, when faced with a cut in the school budget, eliminates football.

I say that the sane folk ought to instead respond in kind. What offends feminists the most? -- Men with guns. The gun is viewed as a phallic object that is p*nis-like and projects power/projectiles. It also plays into their fear that all men seek to subjugate women into a Peyton Place-like servility and that white men with guns are the world's most evil incarnation.

So bring guns. Not real ones, of which there likely are rules (including range-safety ones which conservatives support which would preclude waving a real gun in everyone's face), but fake ones. Big ones. Ones on the size ratio of the seven foot vagina.

Have a bring-your-paper-machae-cannon-to-class week. Have clearly-not-real guns being carried everywhere and going everywhere the vagina goes. The feminazis would be so upset it wouldn't be funny at which point a civilized deal could be struck: we will stop if you do.

Or there could be a debate between mascots - the vagina debating the cannon. Scary thing is that some of the potheads would think it was real...

Answer: Your other mommy and I fought the evil heterodoxy and worked hard to secure the freedom (from men) that you now enjoy. That is why I want you to promise me that, when you grow up and want to become a mommy yourself, you will only go to the sperm bank.

There are only two types of gyrls involved in the feminist centers today: man-hating "seperatists" and LUGGIES. The latter stands for "Lesbian Until Graduation" and are persons literally prostituting themselves for personal gain -- being a lesbian is socially rewarded in academia so they are one, upon graduation when sex with a man will get them material gain they become heterosexual, and then they become victims and the state their husband. And the former seek to create a world in which there are no men.

So the people advocating the vagina costume are not going to become the traditional "mommie." The problem is far worse than many imagine...

Good morning to you. I have actually never read of Dr. Adam's expressing hate against anyone. He will disparage their intelligence, actions, words, sins or hypocrisy. He hates the sin, not the sinner. This man was an atheist that saw the light and was saved. Having made the journey to the Lord as an adult, he understands what it means to walk the walk. He would like nothing better than for all the paganists to also see the light and know the love and glory of God. The Christian belief requires this of him; to understand that paganism is wrong and to pray for the deliverance of its practitioners.

You paint a very gloomy and disturbing picture....absolutely true, but troubling nevertheless.

It's sort of ironic, I am one of the most patriotic Americans you will ever find, but part of me wants to retire overseas....it doesn't hurt as much when I don't see the destruction in person.

But, I guess I should stay and fight the lunacy...even if it's a losing battle. Maybe we need a conservative rally cry like, "Remember the Alamo". Any ideas?

in 1984. I remember one Halloween Party where a participant was dressed as a male sex organ. As I recall, the gals at the party thought it was quite a hoot and took turns in a variety of poses. The guys at the party took it in stride and offered their encouragement and evaluations to the gals artistic performances. ( Use your imaginations people, you know what I am alluding to here.)

I suspect that if roles were reversed say a gal wearing a Virgie suit walked in and a group of guys began to immediately immitate intimate acts, the gals would not have been as vociferous in their support. Truth be told, they probably would have been p,o'ed.

Looks like UNCW is on the cusp of an interesting sociology experiment. If Pirate is right, we will find out how many militant feminist are on the campus. It may well turn out to be that Vergie's most vocal critics will be those women who realize that mystique requires discretion.

We do live in interesting times.

A Saxon ancestor would have said that it was a stupid c**t in a stupid c**t costume. I can't say that here. It violates the speech code here! It might offend a conservative.

Congratulations on your victory over one of the common speech codes that "liberals" like to use to stop opposition. However, I am tempted to wonder if its free speech or offending liberals that is being sought. This "Townhall" forum has its own speech code, does not allow free speech. Ranting about someone else's speech code fails to impress me when the forum used for the rant maintains its own strict speech code.

Hypocrisy rages on!

Bob

The problem with your analogy is this: Profanity, vulgarity, and obscenity are censored because in general, they violate what is known as common decency. Bleeding Heart Liberal says it best above: "Bad taste is bad taste, politically correct or not." The speech codes at universities don't censor things that violate common decency (in many cases they make a positive effort NOT to censor those things) they censor ideas that violate "the Most Holy Tenet of Diversity." In any normal environment I can say "Homosexuality is immoral" without any issue. Such a statement does not violate common decency. There is nothing inherently offensive about that statement. It is a simple declaration that a particular activity is morally unacceptable. It is however, intolerant of that behavior, calling it morally objectionable, and thus inferring that someone who practices it is doing something wrong. To a university, making such a statement is censorable and the person making the statement can be sanctioned by the university.

The speech codes at university are also never enforced evenly. I, a Christian conservative, cannot insult a gay man's sexual practices, but the gay man can insult my religion because the religion is itself "intolerant." Speech codes are not intended to discourage us from using impolite words when we speak, but to discourage ideas and opinions that do not conform to the liberal pantheon.

"Remember Ike"?

"Take Back America"?

Simply singing "Onward Christian Soldiers" serves to upset the leftists to no end. Best sung by not-quite-sober undergraduates who wouldn't be on key if they were.

I still like the idea of a bunch of ASU undergrads quietly showing up to classes with their paper machie cannons in tow. Setting up a clearly-fake machine gun on tripod, lash together a strip of tampons to make an ammo belt to feed into the "gun." One could be truly sophmoric and have great fun with all of this - sure it is offensive but this really is a war.
