

Just as with other aspects of identity, medical information is personal and private. However, sometimes people are curious and ask inappropriate questions.

Review the scenario and respond to the question that follows.

You overhear Adea talking to Lucy, who has recently announced she's pregnant. Adea knows that Lucy is married to a woman, Zaineb. "Wait . . ." Adea says. "So how did you get pregnant then? Was it like a friend or a donor or something? Did you do IVF?"

What should you do?

- Wait for Lucy to respond. You were kind of wondering, too!
- Intervene. Those questions are a little invasive!

Not Quite

It's inappropriate for Adea to ask a colleague invasive medical questions. Try again.

That's Right

It's inappropriate for Adea to ask a colleague invasive medical questions.
