University statement on issuing statements

Aug. 28, 2024

Conflicts, world events and controversial moments happen that impact people on our campus every semester. Rather than taking positions and issuing administrative statements, in these moments the campus will instead: 1) encourage opportunities to process and learn through the academic expertise of our faculty, 2) provide direct outreach to affected student and employee groups with offers of support, and 3) activate resources for mental health and wellness, dialogue and community-building needs.

The CU Boulder administration may issue communications and take positions on issues, incidents or other situations that affect core functions at the university.
